The case was one in which miracles, sorcery, and witchcraft

tive to a miraculous figure known as "Weeping Virgin". A certain Madame Marie Mesmin had this wonderful statue of the Virgin in her possession. The bank clerk stated that he had seen the statue and that there was no doubt that it wept real tears, which could be collected in a little vase for the cure of the sick. The tears in the vase increased until they overflowed, when, being transferred to a large glass, they still swelled until several vessels were full. In 1914 the Abbé Sapounghi paid a visit to Madame Mesmin, who, so it is stated, not only made him welcome, but deprived herself in order that he might be clothed and provided for. The abbé is declared to have repaid her kindness by the endeavour to get into his own hands the sums accruing from the "miracles" of the Weeping Virgin. Finally, on account of unpriestlike conduct, the abbé was sent to Nantes by order of the ecclesiastical authorities, who also ordered that the Weeping Virgin should be taken to a Franciscan convent, where, ever since, her eyes have been dry.

cution. An invisible mouth bit her and left the traces of its teeth on her cheek. The most terrible suffering and temptations assailed her, including a homicidal tendency. She was convinced that all this was due to the evil influence of the abbé, who, she said, had a magnetic power over her. Further, she declared that Sapounghi had celebrated Black Masses, for which he employed the blood of toads and other unclean

In order to put an end to the persecution endured by Madame Mesmin, the four defendants decided to go to Nantes to force Sapounghi to return certain papers relating to Our Lady of Tears, alleged to have been stolen by him, and also to destroy his instruments of sorcery. They armed themselves with spiritual and temporal weapons, and, after an early morning Mass, invaded the abbé's sanctuary. Their temporal arms included a dog-whip, a rubbertube filled with lead shot, a horse-whip, and handcuffe, the last provided by the police inspector. The struggle lasted some three-quarters of an hour, the "magician" putting up a vigorous resistance, even endeavouring to use a knife, but at last, smarting and bound on the floor, he gave up the keys of his desk. In this were found 631 letters and a number of articles which, it was supposed, he used in his sorceries, but no trace of the wax figure was discovered. The four spell-breakers then left. It was at this precise moment, according to Madame Mesmin, that she ceased to suffer all figured. The defendants, however, were not accused of magic, but, as stated above, of assault. It was the plaintiff whose alleged dealings in sorcery led the four accused to do him bodily hurt. The defendants were accused by the plaintiff, the Abbé Sapounghi, describing himself as a former Vicar-General of Syria, of having had resort to assault and violence in order to extort from him certain documents rela-

AMERICAN PRESIDENCY. MR. HOOVER'S "BOOM."

HEARST'S LATEST CANARD.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT. NEW YORK, SUNDAY. Mr. Hearst's newspapers have organised a campaign to defeat Mr. Hoover's boom for the Presidency on the grounds that Mr. Hoover's backing comes from three quarters only, "Wall Street, Great Britain, and the White House." As to Great Britain I need not tell you that Mr. Hearst's allegation is preposterous, but the type of reader to whom he appeals is ready to believe anything and everything if there is a chance of injuring Anglo-American friendship. Mr. Hearst, in an editorial, explains that Americans do not dislike the British, but we do dislike, he says, British "I mperialism" and the British aristocratic caste, who find jobs as the tools of British Imperialism.

According to Mr. Hearst's story, which is submitted to some millions of readers through his chain of newspapers, the boom for Mr. Hoover was launched at a most exclusive luncheon given by Colonel House, friend and confidant of President Wilson. "At the luncheon given by Colonel House there were representatives of the various interests supporting Mr. Hoover, and anxious to secure his election as President. They included Ralph Pulitzer and Frank Cobb, respectively owner and editor of the New York World, Cleveland H. Dodge, the THI Street nancier, Cyrus Curtis, the Philadelphia publisher, and Viscount Grey, the British Ambassador to the United States." "It is rather unusual," says Mr. Hearst's New Yor k American, "to have the British Ambassador present at an occasion at which a boom for American President is launched, but Mr. Hoover is understood to be the candidate of the Democratic administration pledged to perpetuate the Wilson policies, and naturally the British Ambassador is anxious to see the policies continued which have been so advantageous to England.

A SOCIAL LUNCHEON.

I need not tell you that the luncheon in question was purely a social affair such as takes place in New York almost daily, and had not the remotest connection with politics. In ordinary circumstances one might dismiss the story and the innuendo with the contempt it deserves, but as an illustration of the depths to which party politicians will descend when a Presidential election is at hand the story has a special value which will appeal to all students of Anglo-Amer-

According to the New York American, "the participation of Lord Grey in the meeting at which the boom for Hoover was launched created a sensation in the Senate." I see no confirmation whatever for this statement, because the legislators at Washington are perfectly well acquainted with Hearst journalism, and do not attach the slightest value to a story designed only to tickle the palates of Anglophobes. Mr. Pulitzer, one of those present at the luncheon given by Colonel House, says the story is a "pure fake." He adds: "The luncheon was merely a social affair... and there was no discussion whatever of Presidential candidates."

NEW OUTRAGE BY THE POET D'ANNUNZIO. GENERAL KIDNAPPED.

FROM A. BEAUMONT. MILAN, SATURDAY.

Fiume has again become the scene of extraordinary incidents, one of which is the capture and kidnapping of General Nigra, commander of the Italian troops on the Armistice Line, outside Fiume. The outrage is straining the patience of the Italian Government to D'Annunzio's latest achievement in unmeasured terms.

General Nigra had become unpopular with D'Annunzio and the Fiume garrison because he strictly enforced his orders and was vigilant along the frontier line. There had been a friendly understanding between the Fiume garrison and the Italian Regulars on the frontier line, by which both sides freely approached each other, and the Fiume patriots took advantage of this to waylay General Nigra. His capture had been decided upon by the Fiume patriots, and D'Annunzio had given instruction to an officer to seize the general. The officer entrusted with this mission laid his plans, and, learning some days ago that General Nigra was going to Trieste, and would return alone with his chauffeur in the evening, he placed a small body of Arditi in ambush at a passage near Grobnico. Towards evening the motor-car approached, and the six Arditi jumped out into the road, and held up the car. The general immediately divined their intention, and said: "What do you want with me? These are not things to do between friends and Italians." The officer replied that he had orders to arrest him and conduct him to Fiume.

After a useless protest General Nigra yielded and was conducted some distance on foot, across the fields and out of sight of the sentries, into the territory of Fiume and, as no means of conveyance was at hand, he was compelled to continue the way into the town of Fiume afoot. It was already late when he arrived with his escort at the Governor's residence, and was placed, by D'Annunzio's orders, under arrest in the Governor's Palace with a sentry before his door. He has not been free to communicate with anyone without D'Annunzio's permission.

This new incident is described as intolerable by the leading newspapers. The Corriere della Sera says: "The moral and material relations between the Commander of Fiume and the Italian Government have become intolerable, and the adventure of General Nigra being arrested by a dozen Arditi and two subaltern officers by command of the Governor of Fiume cannot be read without making every Italian blush. D'Annunzio's expedition from Ronchi perhaps avoided Fiume being policed by foreigners, but after his first success there was no excuse for him for helping to create in the Ital ian army a deplorable spirit of insubordination and contempt for discipline. Some of his first companions realised it, and have gradually withdrawn from him. Openhanded brigandage is rampant in Istria, and D'Annunzio's Arditi have shown how easy it is to kidnap an Italian general on the public highway. These men, who left Italy in the name of patriotism. foster such insubordination in the army as to expose the whole country to danger. Only a few days ago they seized an Italian steamer with merchandise and millions aboard on the high seas, as in the old days of pirates, and to-day they carry off a general from the midst of his command. Their blindness is such that they disregard not only the plebiscite and the people of Fiume, and remain there against the will of its inhabitants, but nourish vague revolutionary ideas of championing every insurrection and universal conflagration which is to consume the British Empire, after which, they proclaim, Italy will be great and prosperous." The Corriere here, for the first time, hints at the anti-British campaign conducted by D'Annunzio, hitherto completely unknown to the Italian public, and which excited general amazement even

The Shirley Sherwood Collection By Dr Shirley Sherwood

Modern masterpieces of botanical art from 36 countries

This book is a celebration of the Shirley Sherwood Collection of contemporary botanical art, made over a period of 30 years by Dr Shirley Sherwood and considered the most important private collection of its kind in the world. This book features 285 botanical paintings by 144 artists from 36 countries.

The paintings are arranged in chapters by geographical origin of the artists, and each artwork is beautifully reproduced on a single page. An additional chapter features the 1,000th painting by Coral Guest, and how this was initiated and added to the collection. Biographies of all the artists featuredare provided at the back of the book.

OFFICIALLISTOFWAR CRIMINALS.

ALLIES TO INSIST.

The list of war criminals whose surrender is demanded by the Allies is to be handed to the German Government without delay. It will be accompanied by a covering letter, the text of which was drawn up at the meeting of the Ambassadors' Council yesterday morning. The terms of the further letter to the German Government with respect to the manner in which the surrender is to be carried out and other details will probably be agreed upon at the meeting of the British, French, and Italian Prime Ministers in Lon don this week.

Yesterday morning many rumours were afloat as to an alleged difference of opinion between the British and French Governments on the question, and there has been a good deal of criticism of the British Prime Minister. They had their ori gin in the sudden arrival in Paris on Friday of the Lord Chancellor and the Attorney-General, and in the fact that the former was known to have made a very lengthy statement at the meeting of the Ambassadors' Council that evening. Sufficient commentary on this incident is, however, provided by the official communiqué issued at the conclusion of the meeting of the Council yesterday morning, which brought the matter to a settlement. It is as follows:

would be regarded as most regrettable.

NO CHANGE OF POLICY.

Reuter's Agency states that while there is great-reluctance in diplomatic or Ministerial quarters to discuss the question arisin g out of the presentation, of the list of Germans whose trial is demanded by the Allies, it is clear that the situation that has arisen has been largely the result of misunderstanding. It is understood that the list, so far as the French and Belgian portions of it were concerned, was not seen in this country. It has not been a question of change of mind, but of Great Britain being committed to lists she has not seen. Happily, the visit of the Lord Chancellor and the Attorney-General to Paris has resulted in the affair being completely cleared up.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO The Daily Telegraph.

COMPLETE UNANIMITY.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT. PARIS, SUNDAY.

"The Conference was unanimous in deciding that the list of accused should be handed to the German Chancellor by the French Chargé d'Affaires in the name of the Allied Powers with the

The Allies, therefore, remain unanimous in demanding the surrender of the war criminals in accordance with the terms of the Treaty. The Treaty having been finally ratified and being in force, feeling here is insistent that Germany should have to carry out the terms to which she has agreed, and any real difference of opinion between the Allies on this subject

The list of persons whose surrender is demanded has been in the hands of the French Chargé d'Affaires for several days, inasmuch as it was sent by a special messenger who left here on Wednesday night, travelling in the same train as Herr von Lersner. It was not delivered, however, pending the final instructions from Paris and the receipt of the new covering letter which has been sent by telegram. It is stated that the terms of this letter are practically identical, except in so far as account is taken of the correct attitude of the German Government with regard to Herr von Lersner's departure.

The Life of Churchill's Cook

This is the story of a woman who was not a royal, not rich, not famous - simply someone who worked hard and enjoyed her life.

From 1882, she ranged through life in the country, life in the town, life in her own house and in those of others. She travelled.

married, had children and developed a highly successful career. For awhile, Georgina Landemare saw herself as ordinary. But her accomplishments and the life that she lived were anything but. From being a nursemaid, she became the cook for Winston Churchill, one of the best-known figures in British history - a man to whom food was central, not only as a pleasure in itself, but as an aid to diplomacy when the world was embroiled in war.
